

New Echinacea varieties!

These days I try to be careful about getting excited about new plant introductions. Too often, they hit the market before they are tried and true. A few years ago I was overly excited about some of the Echinaceas, in awesome new colors, that hit the market. They were NOT very tried and true and I swore I would never get excited about Echinaceas again! So you know that saying about "A woman's prerogative"...

This year, we have new Echinaceas that are just AWESOME!

I know, I know, but I have grown these for 2 years now and am very confident in their abilities. I do not want to steer you wrong (and get yelled at!). We have had them off and on all last year and you snapped them up faster than I could restock them. Check them out below and then come on in and get them!

Echinacea purpurea "PowWow Series": 'Wildberry' or 'White':

When 'Magnus', hit the market was the primo plant. Now it is going to be swept aside. The new PowWow series has it beat hands down. 'Wildberry' is rosy-purple and 'White' is snowy white. The two coolest things about these varieties is that they are heavily branched - producing multitudes of flower all down the plant and they are bred to be shorter and much bushier. The PowWow series grows 18-20" tall, flowers 3-3.5" diameter.

Echinacea "Sombrero" series 'Salsa Red' & 'Hot Coral':

First the names - how can you go wrong? Then the colors; 'Salsa Red' is a deep red-orange and 'Hot Coral' is, well a little hard to explain - how about pink-coral fading outwards on the petals to salmon then orange-yellow. Both on short bushy, compact plants. However, most importantly - unlike many of the other "odd colored" Echinaceas these babies are rock hardy! 'Hot Coral' grows 18-22" tall, flowers 3" diameter

See ya soon!
